At the beginning of the programme, Dr. Jyoti Nayak, Principal Scientist took the time to explain the benefits of sanitation and how can one not only keep the household clean but also on keeping the surroundings clean. Special effort was put in explaining on separation of dry and wet waste, bio degradable and recyclable waste. Few tips and advices were also given to the farmwomen of the village to ensure proper drainage of waterlogged areas, which becomes more vulnerable to the breeding of mosquitoes and other micro organisms leading to spread of different sickness and diseases. The farmwomen were also advised to dig pits in their backyard for the kitchen bio-degradable waste which will not only help increase the soil health but also is a solution for open decomposing of the waste which produces bad odour and attracts houseflies and other germ carriers.

After short speech made on sanitation, all the villagers mostly farmwomen took brooms and started cleaning in front of their community centre. Few boys from the village were asked to chop the banana plants into small pieces before throwing the residue in the dumping yard, which fastens the rate of decomposing. Before leaving the village, it was made sure that the target area was best cleaned and important and vital lessons and benefits of sanitation has well percolated to the villagers. Dr. Tanuja, Scientist led the farmwomen during a short rally across the village and raised slogans related to sanitation drive. Smt. Geeta Saha, Technical Officer and Shri. Atul C.
